First Oyster Fishermen
WILMINGTON, DEL. — Oyster fishing along Delaware bay has been traced to early American Indians. The Indians started their fishing in October and continued during the winter months because they knew the oysters were best during the cold season.

The Indians were the originators of the custom of eating oysters during the "R" months.

Love and X's Any More
LONDON — British sailors no longer may sign letters to their girlfriends with the traditional "Love and X's." Regulations ban the use of the "X" because it might be employed by spies for code messages.

Housewives Are Told
Proper Way to Boil Eggs
LEWISTON, MAINE. — Harold Botsel, manager of the New England Fresh Egg institute, says nine out of ten housewives don't know how to boil an egg.

He told the Maine Poultry association that most women drop eggs in boiling water, leave them there a few minutes and expect a hard-boiled egg. The proper way, he said, is to place the egg in lukewarm water and let the water come slowly to a boil.

Indians Volunteer For Defense Army

Members of Tribes Enlist For Active Service.

WASHINGTON.—Hundreds of Indians from every part of the United States are voluntarily joining the armed forces of the country, according to reports received by John Collier, commissioner of Indian affairs. In addition to these, many others are preparing for defense service in technical capacities.

A typical incident reported is that of nine young men of the Sioux, employed as carpenters on a government building project in their reservation. They heard an announcement of the draft. They snorted derisively and one said:

"Since when has it been necessary to conscript the Sioux as fighters?"

Whereupon they laid down their saws and hammers and reported at once to the nearest recruiting office. They are now in training with the hospital detachment at Hamilton Field Air Base at Ross, Calif.

In Oklahoma, 30 Comanches selected from many applicants to form a unit, apparently unique in military history. They are to be part of a special detachment to make use of the Comanche language, because it is so little known.

The idea for this unit was suggested by an experience of the A. B. C. having difficulty in preventing the enemy from intercepting and decoding its messages, used two Indian operators. They spoke in their own language and the enemy never succeeded in decoding the unintelligible sounds which came over the wire. The device was used effectively in last year's war maneuvers.

White-Ground Prints New

In Summer Fashion Picture

It is the white-ground prints that have the coveted "new" look. The black-on-white combination is especially smart. Wear with these black-and-white one of the very stylish large Milan hats, carry a patent bag matched with pumps, splash a dash of red or yellow in gloves and your boutonniere—the sun total will be "style."

Blue on white is also new and the prints that pattern red or yellow on white are exceedingly chic.

Handknit Apparel Enjoys Increase in Popularity

There is a large demand for handknit apparel. Even the machine knits have been brought to such a point of perfection that they have the handknit look. Dresses are so expertly fashioned that they do not miss any of the styling details that give distinction to fabric treatments.

Sweaters and cardigans abound in unique trimmings, such as wool yards, the nearest recruiting office. They are now in training with the hospital detachment at Hamilton Field Air Base at Ross, Calif.
